What! Give you a quarter for that mut? Say, do you think I'm plumb daft?

Why, that there cur aint even safe, let alone bein' valuable!

Looky at that stripe on his side!

That's a sure sign o' tiger blood an' makes him as treacherous as a snake!

He's liable to snap yir leg any minute — Quarter, my foot!

What'll you take for him?

I'll give you a dime an' my blue top — but he aint worth it — that dog aint —

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

I thought that details spoiled my life, That I would rise above all these — I dropped a collar button then, And there went all my theories.

He is so realistic — His moral compass tight!

BUNNY

Did you ever notice how the Poms strut by the mutts they meet?

You'd think these prideful little Poms owned both sides of the street.

The old dog here thinks it a show he thinks young Pom an ass.

His owner too is quite amused to see Pom's mistress pass.

MY POOR BALK — I WANTED TO TAKE A NICE WARM BATH LAST NIGHT AND FOUND THE TUB HALF FULL OF PICTURE FRAMES, AND WHEN I THREW THEM OUT, THE BOTTOM WAS ALL COVERED WITH BLUE CALCIMINE — THAT PAINTER MUST HAVE STOOD ON HIS HEAD WHEN HE CALCIMINED THAT CEILING!

OH! THIS IS A WONDERFUL LIFE — I'M A WRECK — BALK ALMOST BROKE, MY HANDS ARE SO FULL OF BLISTER'S IT HURTS ME TO LIFT A SPONGE —
